

Editor's Note

It is a pleasure to present Volume 06, Issue 01 of the Journal of Gono Bishwabidyalay (JGB). This issue reflects our ongoing commitment to publishing research that is grounded in local realities while engaging with wider scholarly debates. As a university-based journal, we aim to provide a dependable platform for educators, researchers, and emerging scholars to share evidence-based work that can inform policy, practice, and future research.

The articles in this issue demonstrate the value of careful fieldwork, clear methodology, and responsible interpretation of findings. We particularly appreciate submissions that connect research questions to real-world needs, use appropriate analytical approaches, and communicate results in a way that is useful beyond a narrow academic audience. Alongside substantive contributions, this issue also reinforces an important point: good research is not only about results, but also about transparency, ethical awareness, and the ability to explain limitations honestly.

Every manuscript published here has gone through an editorial and peer-review process designed to uphold academic quality while supporting authors with constructive guidance. We recognize that many contributors work with limited resources and challenging research environments. For that reason, we encourage rigorous but realistic scholarship, where clarity, integrity, and relevance matter as much as complexity.

We extend our sincere thanks to our reviewers for their time, critical insight, and professionalism. Their careful evaluations strengthen the journal and help authors refine their work. We also thank the authors for trusting JGB as a home for their research and for their patience through revisions and editorial communication.

We welcome future submissions for upcoming issues and encourage researchers from diverse disciplines to contribute. We are particularly interested in manuscripts that present original research, thoughtful reviews, and well-argued perspectives that can support Bangladesh's social, economic, educational, and public health development, while also contributing to broader knowledge.

On behalf of the Editorial Board, we hope readers find this issue informative, relevant, and useful for research, teaching, and professional practice.
